Career & Educational Opportunities

Communication, as a discipline, is often interested in how messages are crafted and how people interpret and act on those messages. In the BS-COMM, we teach you how to analyze situations, design and conduct background research, collect, analyze, display and evaluate data, and create messages which allow you to intervene for mutual benefit in contexts ranging from Global Media, Health Communication, Social Justice, Strategic Communication (public relations, integrated marketing communication, advertising, promotions,) Social Media, or Leadership and Conflict Management, to name a few. Whether you are intervening to sell products and conduct business, promote people or ideas, or work to foster political, religious or social ideas, the principles and practice of communication intervention, serve well.

The BS-COMM and the BA-COMM share some coursework. The BA-COMM has an arts and humanities orientation and is supported by the study of four semesters of foreign language. Study abroad is encouraged though not required. The BS-COMM has a communication science and practice emphasis and rather than foreign language, is supported by quantitative and research design coursework.

COMM students acquire a significant set of marketable skills, create a portfolio to display their projects to future employers and are well positioned for the work world, for graduate programs and professional school admission. For more information please visit careercenter.tamu.edu.
